Universal Signage reaches more Customers at the Pump

(Elizabeth, NJ) March 1, 2008 – Universal Signage's Pump Topper, Bumper Board, and Walli help to enhance fueling sites while targeting customers as they refuel. Universal's signage systems can help increase profits by strategically utilizing already existing space.

The Pump Topper is designed to mount to the top of fuel dispensers, to advertise in-store specials. The Pump Topper sign display grabs the attention of customers as they refuel to maximize sales volume. Universal's Pump Topper encourages consumers to take advantage of special offers running inside the store that they may otherwise not know about. The painted aluminum frame is designed to weather the elements. With a side loading feature it is easy to change messages for everyday specials all week long.

Universal Signage's Bumper Board is intended to mount on existing bumper guards that protect fueling stations. It is a fact that the average consumer takes 6 minutes to fuel their car; with a Bumper Board in front of them while they refuel it is sure to catch their attention. Customers will not miss current promotions because of these specially placed messages consumers can easily see. These epoxy coated steel frames can stand up to bad weather while still getting the message across to consumers.

Universal's Walli is designed to mount to any window, wall, or vertical space to highlight current offerings. The Walli enhances fueling sites by reaching consumers with space not being utilized already. The Walli stops consumers and brings them into the store. Take advantage of unused space to reach more customers at the pump to draw them into the store. The Walli efficiently targets consumers to buy in the store. The epoxy coated steel frame holds strong in bad
